On a worsted stocking he found 956 thriving colonies, while on a cotton sock there were 712. Both articles had been worn, but nothing is stated of the personal habits of the wearer, 33 colonies were found on a glove, 20 on a piece of woollen stuff, and $ on a piece of cloth. None of these articles had been worn. On a piece of cloth from a garment which had been worn a week there were 28 colonies. Of the micro-organisms on clothing, relatively few were capable of causing disease; the pathegenie species were almost all staphylococci. In one case, however, the typhoid bacillus was found in clothing from 21 to 27 days, and the staphyloccus pyogenes albus (microbe of boils) 19 days after the articles had been worn. The anthrax bacilius found in cothes was still virulent after a year. . The microbe of ery ipelas, on the other hand, could not be found after 18 hours, nor the obolera vibrio after 3 days. Dr. Seits concluded that in toberculous patients the bacillus is not conveyed to linen worn next to the skin of the
